SUIT FOR $10,000 DAMAGES.

Case of Petrone vs. S. and J. Gregson on Trial in Superior Court—Verdict for $4,000 in Railroad Case.

Wednesday afternoon in the superior court after the jury had reported in the railroad case and awarded the plaintiff $4,000, a jury was selected for the trial of the case of Isabella Petrone vs. S. & J. Gregson of this city, who conduct the Norwich Steam Laundry. This is a suit for $10,000 for injuries received by the plaintiff while employed at the laundry on July 17, 1907, when she was a few months over 13 years of age. It is claimed that because of defective machinery her hands were drawn into the mangle and as the result she was in the hospital for twenty-three weeks and has lost the use of her hands. They were not only crushed but terribly burned so that there is now no feeling in them and she has very limited use of them.

The plaintiff, who is 15 years old, was the first witness called and she told of the accident, the suffering she endured, and occupied the entire afternoon, being under cross examination when court adjourned until this morning at 10 o'clock.

She claimed that she saw an advertisement for a girl to work at the laundry and she made application and was told she would be notified if wanted. A man came and told her to come to work and she went. A girl named Lizzie told her how to run the small mangle, an ironing machine the lower roll of which is covered with cloth and the upper, about twice the size of the lower, being shiny and heated. She explained how she operated that machine and stated that she was later put to work on the large mangle with Annie Mack. Her hands got drawn in between the rolls and were crushed and burned, it being necessary to unloosen the rolls and pry them apart to get her hands out.

She was taken to the hospital, where she suffered frightfully, it being necessary to have skin grafted on to both of her hands, the left one from the fingers to the wrist and the right one in the palm. The skin was taken from her mother, brother, sister and herself. She stated that her hands have no feeling from her wrists down. She cannot use them at all, the only thing she can do is to crowd a pen or pencil between the fingers and write a quick hand, although not very plain. She can by using both hands get a glass to her mouth, but cannot dress or undress herself, wash her face, comb her hair, open a door, pick up a coin or paper or assist herself in any way. She is at a convent in New York now and had been to school in this city previous to her accident. She is a bright and intelligent girl and answers promptly.

Under cross examination she stated that she did not think she was 15 when she applied for work but knew how old she was. She said that she did not think the girl who instructed her was her sister, but would not say that she didn't.

The attorneys in the case are Desmond, Shields & Shields for the plaintiff and Brown & Perkins for the defendants.

Furlong Awarded $4,000.

When the court opened Wednesday morning, Attorney Berry finished his argument and was followed by Attorney H. A. Hull in the case of Furlong, adm., vs. the New Haven road. Judge Case charged the jury and they considered the case about an hour and a half, bringing in a verdict for $4,000 at 3.45 o'clock. This was accepted by the court, but Attorney Berry gave notice of an appeal.

TROUBLE WITH A NEW LONDON FIRE HORSE.

Couldn't Keep Still Where Smoke Was and Bolted Up Street With Buggy.

Two Norwich men, a banker and a retired merchant, on a fishing trip out of Boston City way last week, with a horse that formerly belonged to the New London fire department, had a novel and lively experience that they will not forget in some time. Getting the horse from a Norwich fireman, they were warned that he had done duty in the New London fire department and if put in a stall should not be hitched, but have a rope put behind him, but when feeding time came around there was no stall convenient at the farmer's where they put up the team. Accordingly the horse was slipped off and the horse tied to a post for feeding.

Moved to do a little tidying up around the yard, the bank man started the trouble when he gathered a pile of papers and set a match to them. One of the men cut the hitch rope and the horse bolted. The horse was enough for the New London fire horse, which went crazy to be off for the run, plunging and snorting with excitement and getting wilder every minute until one of the men cut the hitch rope and the horse bolted. The horse was out of the farmyard, taking the turn into the road so short that the buggy was almost upset at the outset, but he straightened out in the highway and sped on to the imaginary fire. When the two men had followed after about a mile they found the fire horse had stopped of his own accord and they were able to load him back and fix up the damage occasioned by the false alarm.

EFFORT TO GET WOMAN FROM JAIL.

Counsel Claims Nellie Davis is in Bad Health—Leahy Found Not Guilty—Jury Discharged.

At the opening of the criminal court of common pleas in New London Wednesday morning, Attorney W. J. Shields, representing Nellie Davis, one of the Norwich women who were sentenced to sixty days' imprisonment for keeping houses of ill fame at Norwich, made application to the judge for a review and change of that sentence in her case.

He claimed that it could be shown that Mrs. Davis' health at the present time is very much impaired and that imprisonment in her case for sixty days under prison restraint and discipline was liable to result in her death. That at all events it was certain to be ruinous to her physically and mentally. For the last few months Mrs. Davis has been under medical treatment for serious troubles, which facts the counsel claimed were not brought to the court's attention at the time the sentence was pronounced by the attorneys who then represented her, they being unaware of her ill health.

The counsel asked in view of the facts given that the court revise the sentence and change the same from imprisonment to such fine as the court might deem reasonable. Mr. Shields cited and read from the constitution and other legal authorities principles in support of the application made and he was prepared to prove by physicians the precarious condition of Mrs. Davis' health.

Judge Waller decided that he would appoint Stanton and Rogers as a jury to examine Mrs. Davis and report to him her condition at the present time. The report of these physicians will be laid before the judge at Norwich on Saturday. It was then when further action will be taken in the matter.

After being out about thirty-five minutes the jury in the case against John Leahy of New London, charged with having sold liquor at his season, 35 Potter street, New London, on Sunday, March 28, returned a verdict of not guilty. Mr. Leahy on the same charge was found guilty in the police court and fined $100 and costs.

The Leahy case was the only one tried by the jury in the criminal court of common pleas which came in Tuesday for the June session. It was adjourned Tuesday afternoon and was continued Wednesday morning.

This completed the business of the term and court adjourned without date.
